

PROVED TO BE SMALLPOX

Doctor Wrongly Diagnoses Illness of Patient.

SCHOOL GIRL ONE VICTIM

Infection Due to What Physician Thought Chickenpox—Six Taken to the Hospital.

A fresh outbreak of smallpox, supposed at first to have been chickenpox, has aroused the health department, with the result that six infected persons have been taken from the thirteenth street northwest to the smallpox hospital. The sufferers are Mrs. Cora Burgess, who conducts a boarding house at that address; her thirteen-year-old son, Livingston Burgess; S. Long Spitzer, twenty-two years old; Mrs. J. B. Garrett, Emma Hanby, and Mattie Hanby, ten years old, the last four being boarders.

Typhoid, Said Doctor.

The discovery of the disease came about through Spitzer, who was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital on Sunday, said by an attending physician to be threatened with typhoid fever. The hospital authorities noted slight eruptions on the patient's face and notified the Health Department that the case had the appearance of smallpox. These suspicions were confirmed and Spitzer was at once removed to the smallpox hospital.

A subsequent investigation of the thirteenth street address showed that Spitzer had been infected with the disease through contact with Mrs. Burgess, as was the case with the other five persons. Mrs. Burgess was taken sick three weeks ago with what was supposed to be chickenpox, and is at present almost entirely recovered.

In the cases of Mrs. Garrett, Mrs. Hanby, and Mattie Hanby, the patients are affected, according to the health officer, with a form of varioloid.

Pupil at Franklin School.

Up to yesterday afternoon, Mattie Rodier was a pupil at Franklin School. For several days she has had an eruption on her face, but it is said, it was not noticed by the teacher. When the child's condition was brought to the teacher's attention the health officer was notified. The authorities at once ordered the room closed and thoroughly fumigated.

It cannot be learned this afternoon if any of the other pupils were infected, but they are being watched at their homes by the health officials.

Another girl, a hospital nurse, Miss Bertha Miller, was removed to the smallpox hospital late yesterday afternoon, suffering from varioloid. Miss Miller's case is not thought to have any connection with the infection introduced into Garfield some days ago by the colored patient, Mrs. Hanby, which has so far resulted in five persons being affected, including Dr. Arthur C. Stanley, an internist physician; two nurses, and two colored patients.
